0.1 Pairs Trading Strategies Using Python

When it comes to making money in the stock market, there are a myriad of different ways to make money. And it seems that in the finance community, everywhere you go, people are telling you that you should learn Python. After all, Python is a popular programming language which can be used in all types of fields, including data science. There are a large number of packages that can help you meet your goals, and many companies use Python for development of data-centric applications and scientific computation, which is associated with the financial world.

Most of all Python can help us utilize many different trading strategies that (without it) would be very difficult to analyze by hand or with spreadsheets. One of the trading strategies we will talk about is referred to as Pairs Trading.

0.2 Pairs Trading

Pairs trading is a form of mean-reversion that has a distinct advantage of always being hedged against market movements. It is generally a high alpha strategy when backed up by some rigorous statistics. The strategy is based on mathematical analysis.

The principle is as follows. Let's say you have a pair of securities X and Y that have some underlying economic link. An example might be two companies that manufacture the same product, or two companies in one supply chain. If we can model this economic link with a mathematical model, we can make trades on it.

In order to understand pairs trading, we need to understand three mathematical concepts: Stationarity, Integration, and Cointegration.

Note: This will assume everyone knows the basics of hypothesis testing.

[1]: import numpy as np import pandas as pd import statsmodels import statsmodels.api as sm from statsmodels.tsa.stattools import coint, adfuller import warnings

warnings.filterwarnings('ignore')

import matplotlib.pyplot as plt import seaborn as sns; sns.set(style="whitegrid")

0.2.1 Stationarity/Non-Stationarity

Stationarity is the most commonly untested assumption in time series analysis. We generally assume that data is stationary when the parameters of the data generating process do not change over time. Else consider two series: A and B. Series A will generate a stationary time series with fixed parameters, while B will change over time.

We will create a function that creates a z-score for probability density function. The probability density for a Gaussian distribution is:

$$p(x) = \frac{1}{\sqrt{2\pi\sigma^2}} e^{-\frac{(x-\mu)^2}{2\sigma^2}}$$

μ is the mean and σ is the standard deviation. The square of the standard deviation, σ^2 , is the variance. The empirical rule dictates that 66% of the data should be somewhere between $x + \sigma$ and $x - \sigma$, which implies that the function `numpy.random.normal` is more likely to return samples lying close to the mean, rather than those far away.

[2]: def generate_data(params):
    mu = params[0]
    sigma = params[1]
    return np.random.normal(mu, sigma)
```

From there, we can create two plots that exhibit a stationary and non-stationary time series.

[3]: # Set the parameters and the number of datapoints params = (0, 1)
T = 100

A = pd.Series(index=range(T))
A.name = 'A'

for t in range(T):
    A[t] = generate_data(params)

T = 100

B = pd.Series(index=range(T))
B.name = 'B'

for t in range(T):
    # Now the parameters are dependent on time
    # Specifically, the mean of the series changes over time
    params = (t * 0.1, 1)
    B[t] = generate_data(params)

fig, (ax1, ax2) = plt.subplots(nrows =1, ncols =2, figsize=(16,6))

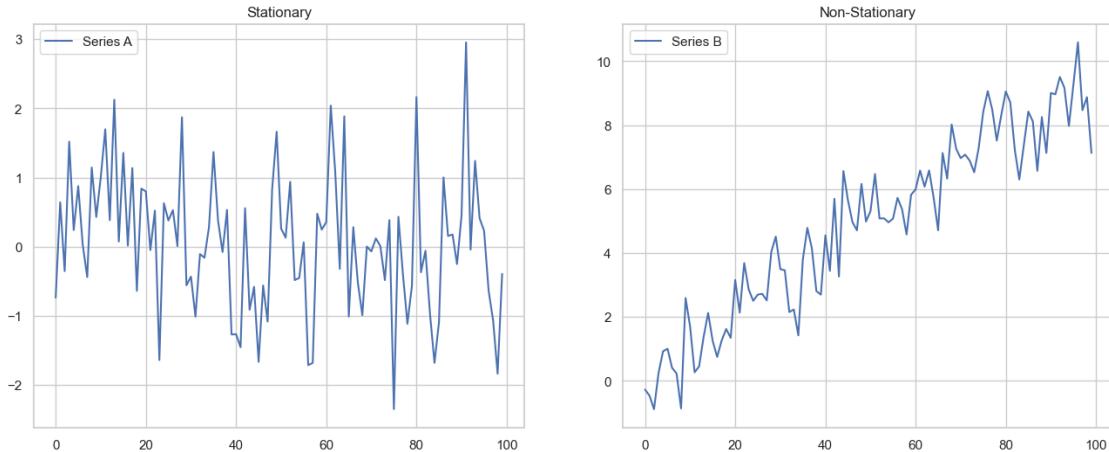

ax1.plot(A)
```

```

ax2.plot(B) ax1.legend(['Series A']) ax2.legend(['Series B']) ax1.set_title('Stationary')
ax2.set_title('Non-Stationary')

```

[3]: Text(0.5, 1.0, 'Non-Stationary')

0.2.2 Why Stationarity is Important

Many statistical test require that the data being tested are stationary. Using certain statistics on a non-stationary data set may lead to garbage results. As an example, let's take an average through our non-stationary B .

[4]: mean = np.mean(B)

plt.figure(figsize=(12,6))
plt.plot(B)
plt.hlines(mean, 0, len(B), linestyles='dashed', colors = 'r')
plt.xlabel('Time')
plt.xlim([0, 99])
plt.ylabel('Value')
plt.legend(['Series B', 'Mean'])

[4]: <matplotlib.legend.Legend at 0x241745cad50>

The computed mean will show that the mean of all data points, but won't be useful for any forecasting of future state. It's meaningless when compared with any specific time, as it's a collection of different states at different times mashed together. This is just a simple and clear example of why non-stationarity can distort the analysis, much more subtle problems can arise in practice.

Augmented Dickey Fuller In order to test for stationarity, we need to test for something called a unit root. Autoregressive unit root test are based the following hypothesis test:

$$\begin{aligned} H_0 : \phi = 1 &\implies y_t \sim I(0) \mid (\text{unit root}) \\ H_1 : |\phi| < 1 &\implies y_t \sim I(0) \mid (\text{stationary}) \end{aligned}$$

It's referred to as a unit root test because under the null hypothesis, the autoregressive polynominal of z_t , $\phi(z) = (1 - \phi z) = 0$, has a root equal to unity.

y_t is trend stationary under the null hypothesis. If y_t is then first differenced, it becomes:

$$\begin{aligned} \Delta y_t &= \delta + \Delta z_t \\ \Delta z &= \phi \Delta z_{t-1} + \varepsilon_t - \varepsilon_{t-1} \end{aligned}$$

The test statistic is $$t_{\phi=1} = \frac{\hat{\phi} - 1}{SE(\hat{\phi})}$$

$\hat{\phi}$ is the least square estimate and $SE(\hat{\phi})$ is the usual standard error estimate. The test is a one-sided left tail test. If $\{y_t\}$ is stationary, then it can be shown that

$$\sqrt{T}(\hat{\phi} - \phi) \xrightarrow{d} N(0, (1 - \phi^2))$$

and it follows that $t_{\phi=1} \stackrel{A}{\sim} N(0, 1)$. However, under the null hypothesis of non-stationarity, the above result gives $$\hat{\phi} \stackrel{A}{\sim} N(0, 1)$$

The following function will allow us to check for stationarity using the Augmented Dickey Fuller (ADF) test.

[5]: def stationarity_test(X, cutoff=0.01):
    # H_0 in adfuller is unit root exists (non-stationary)
    # We must observe significant p-value to convince ourselves that the series ↪is stationary pvalue = adfuller(X)[1]
    if pvalue < cutoff:
        print('p-value = ' + str(pvalue) + ' The series ' + X.name + ' is likely ↪stationary.') else:
        print('p-value = ' + str(pvalue) + ' The series ' + X.name + ' is likely ↪non-stationary.')
```

```
[6]: stationarity_test(A) stationarity_test(B)

p-value = 2.883126355104696e-05 The series A is likely stationary.
p-value = 0.6725944664406256 The series B is likely non-stationary.

As we can see, based on the test statistic (which corresponds with a specific p-value) for time series A, we can fail to reject the null hypothesis. As such, Series A is likely to be stationary. On the other hand, Series B is rejected by the hypothesis test, so this time series is likely to be non-stationary.

0.2.3 Cointegration

The correlations between financial quantities are notoriously unstable. Nevertheless, correlations are regularly used in almost all multivariate financial problems. An alternative statistical measure to correlation is cointegration. This is probably a more robust measure of linkage between two financial quantities, but as yet there is little derivatives theory based on this concept.

Two stocks may be perfectly correlated over short timescales, yet diverge in the long run, with one growing and the other decaying. Conversely, two stocks may follow each other, never being more than a certain distance apart, but with any correlation, positive negative or varying. If we are delta hedging, then maybe the short timescale orrelation matters, but not if we are holding stocks for a long time in an unhedged portfolio.

We've constructed an example of two cointegrated series. We'll plot the difference between the two now so we can see how this looks.

[7]: # Generate daily returns

Xreturns = np.random.normal(0, 1, 100)

sum up and shift the prices up

X = pd.Series(np.cumsum( Xreturns), name='X') + 50
X.plot(figsize=(15,7))

noise = np.random.normal(0, 1, 100)
Y = X + 5 + noise
Y.name = 'Y'

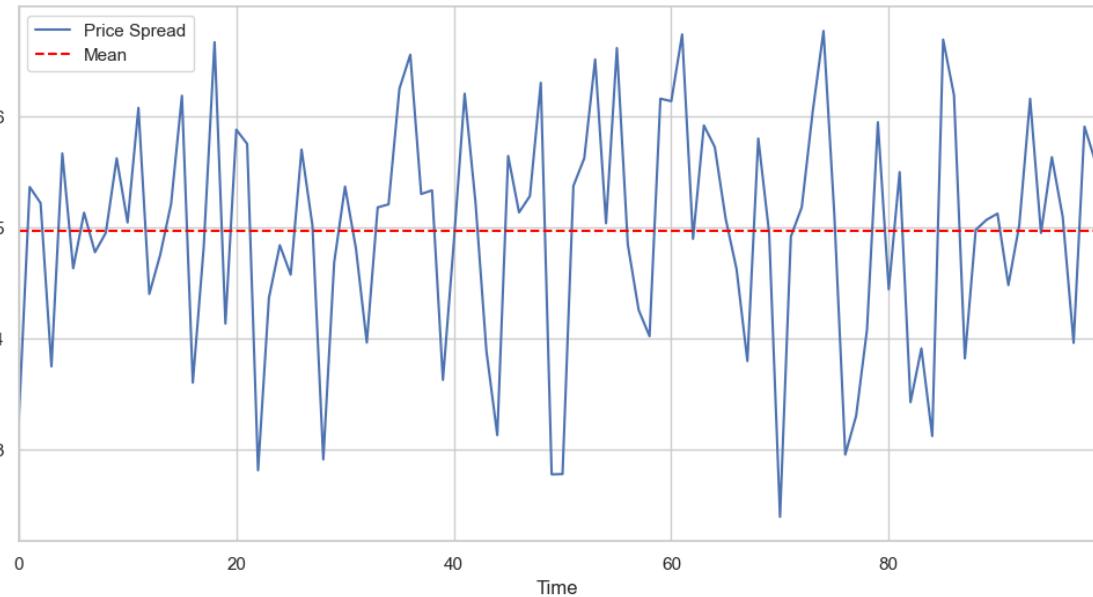

pd.concat([X, Y], axis=1).plot(figsize=(15, 7))

plt.show()
```

```
[8]: plt.figure(figsize=(12,6))
(Y - X).plot() # Plot the spread plt.axhline((Y - X).mean(), color='red', linestyle='--') # Add the mean
plt.xlabel('Time')
plt.xlim(0,99)
plt.legend(['Price Spread', 'Mean']);

Testing for Cointegration The steps in the cointegration test procedure:

1. Test for a unit root in each component series y_t individually, using the univariate unit root tests, say ADF, PP test.
2. If the unit root cannot be rejected, then the next step is to test cointegration among the components, i.e., to test whether αY_t is $I(0)$.

If we find that the time series as a unit root, then we move on to the cointegration process. There are three main methods for testing for cointegration: Johansen, Engle-Granger, and Phillips-Ouliaris. We will primarily use the Engle-Granger test.

Let's consider the regression model for y_t :

$$y_{1t} = \delta D_t + \phi_{1t} y_{2t} + \phi_{m-1} y_{mt} + \varepsilon_t$$

D_t is the deterministic term. From there, we can test whether ε_t is $I(1)$ or $I(0)$. The hypothesis test is as follows:

$$\begin{aligned} H_0 : \varepsilon_t &\sim I(1) \implies y_t \text{ (no cointegration)} \\ H_1 : \varepsilon_t &\sim I(0) \implies y_t \text{ (cointegration)} \end{aligned}$$ y_t is cointegrated with a normalized cointegration vector $\alpha = (1, \phi_1, \dots, \phi_{m-1})$.

We also use residuals ε_t for unit root test.

$$\begin{aligned} H_0 : \lambda &= 0 \text{ (Unit Root)} \\ H_1 : \lambda &< 1 \text{ (Stationary)} \end{aligned}$$

This hypothesis test is for the model:

$$\Delta \varepsilon_t = \lambda \varepsilon_{t-1} + \sum_{j=1}^{p-1} \varphi \Delta \varepsilon_{t-j} + \alpha_t$$

The test statistic for the following equation:

$$t_\lambda = \frac{\hat{\lambda}}{s_{\hat{\lambda}}}$$

Now that you understand what it means for two time series to be cointegrated, we can test for it and measure it using python:

[9]: score, pvalue, _ = coint(X,Y) print(pvalue)

Low pvalue means high cointegration!

1.3625495865372234e-12

Correlation vs. Cointegration Correlation and cointegration, while theoretically similar, are anything but similar. To demonstrate this, we can look at examples of two time series that are correlated, but not cointegrated.

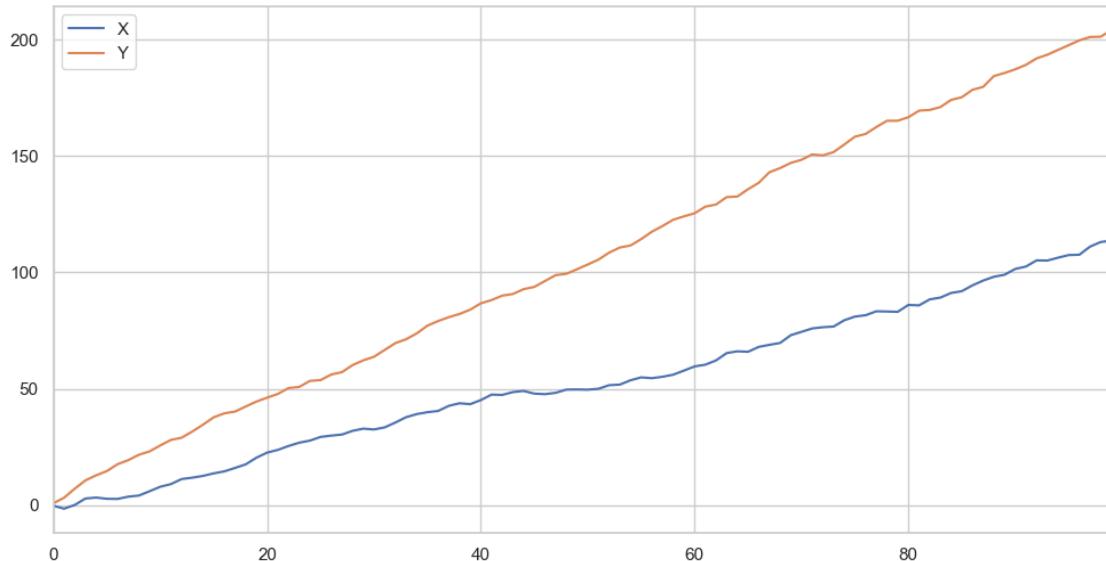

A simple example is two series that just diverge.

[10]: X_returns = np.random.normal(1, 1, 100)
Y_returns = np.random.normal(2, 1, 100)

X_diverging = pd.Series(np.cumsum(X_returns), name='X')
Y_diverging = pd.Series(np.cumsum(Y_returns), name='Y') pd.concat([X_diverging, Y_diverging], axis=1).plot(figsize=(12,6));

plt.xlim(0, 99)

[10]: (0.0, 99.0)

Next, we can print the correlation coefficient, r , and the cointegration test

[11]: print('Correlation: ' + str(X_diverging.corr(Y_diverging))) score, pvalue, _ = coint(X_diverging,Y_diverging) print('Cointegration test p-value: ' + str(pvalue))
```

```
Correlation: 0.9955361218783301
Cointegration test p-value: 0.7686736864971522

As we can see, there is a very strong (nearly perfect) correlation between series X and Y. However, our p-value for the cointegration test yields a result of 0.7092, which means there is no cointegration between time series X and Y.

Another example of this case is a normally distributed series and a square wave.

[12]: Y2 = pd.Series(np.random.normal(0, 1, 1000), name='Y2') + 20
Y3 = Y2.copy()

Y2 = Y2 + 10
Y3[0:100] = 30
Y3[100:200] = 10
Y3[200:300] = 30
Y3[300:400] = 10
Y3[400:500] = 30
Y3[500:600] = 10
Y3[600:700] = 30
Y3[700:800] = 10
Y3[800:900] = 30
Y3[900:1000] = 10

plt.figure(figsize=(12,6))
Y2.plot()
Y3.plot()
plt.ylim([0, 40])
plt.xlim([0, 1000]);

correlation is nearly zero
print('Correlation: ' + str(Y2.corr(Y3))) score, pvalue, _ = coint(Y2,Y3)
print('Cointegration test p-value: ' + str(pvalue))
```

Correlation: 0.021530655494386156

Cointegration test p-value: 0.0

Although the correlation is incredibly low, the p-value shows that these time series are cointegrated.

from pandas_datareader import data as pdr import datetime import yfinance as yf yf.pdr_override()

0.2.4 Data Science in Trading

Before we begin, I'll first define a function that makes it easy to find cointegrated security pairs using the concepts we've already covered.

[14]: def find_cointegrated_pairs(data):
    n = data.shape[1]
    score_matrix = np.zeros((n, n))
    pvalue_matrix = np.ones((n, n))
    keys = data.keys() pairs = []
    for i in range(n):
        for j in range(i+1, n):
            S1 = data[keys[i]] S2 = data[keys[j]] result = coint(S1, S2)
            score = result[0]
            pvalue = result[1]
            score_matrix[i, j] = score
            pvalue_matrix[i, j] = pvalue
            if pvalue < 0.05:
                pairs.append((keys[i], keys[j])) return score_matrix, pvalue_matrix, pairs

We are looking through a set of tech companies to see if any of them are cointegrated. We'll start by defining the list of securities we want to look through. Then we'll get the pricing data for each security from the year 2013 - 2018..

As mentioned before, we have formulated an economic hypothesis that there is some sort of link between a subset of securities within the tech sector and we want to test whether there are any cointegrated pairs. This incurs significantly less multiple comparisons bias than searching through hundreds of securities and slightly more than forming a hypothesis for an individual test.

import seaborn
fig, ax = plt.subplots(figsize=(10,10)) seaborn.heatmap(pvalues, xticklabels=df.columns, yticklabels=df.columns, cbar=False, cmap='RdYlGn_r', mask = (pvalues >= 0.05))
print(pairs)
```

```
[('AAPL', 'ORCL'), ('AAPL', 'SPY'), ('ADBE', 'MSFT'), ('AMD', 'MSFT'), ('HPQ', 'ORCL'), ('ORCL', 'SPY')]
```

Our algorithm listed two pairs that are cointegrated: AAPL/EBAY, and ADBE/MSFT. We can analyze their price patterns to make sure there is nothing weird going on.

[17]: S1 = df['ADBE']
S2 = df['MSFT']

score, pvalue, _ = coint(S1, S2) pvalue

[17]: 0.04452696271616793

As we can see, the p-value is less than 0.05, which means ADBE and MSFT are indeed cointegrated pairs.

Calculating the Spread Now we can plot the spread of the two time series. In order to actually calculate the spread, we use a linear regression to get the coefficient for the linear combination to construct between our two securities, as mentioned with the Engle-Granger method before.

[18]: S1 = sm.add_constant(S1)
results = sm.OLS(S2, S1).fit() S1 = S1['ADBE']
b = results.params['ADBE'] spread = S2 - b * S1 spread.plot(figsize=(12,6)) plt.axhline(spread.mean(), color='black')

plt.xlim('2013-01-01', '2018-01-01')
plt.legend(['Spread']);
```

Alternatively, we can examine the ratio between the two time series

```
[19]: ratio = S1/S2
ratio.plot(figsize=(12,6)) plt.axhline(ratio.mean(), color='black')
plt.xlim('2013-01-01', '2018-01-01')
plt.legend(['Price Ratio']);

Regardless of whether or not we use the spread approach or the ratio approach, we can see that our first plot pair ADBE/SYMC tends to move around the mean. We now need to standardize this ratio because the absolute ratio might not be the most ideal way of analyzing this trend. For this, we need to use z-scores.

A z-score is the number of standard deviations a datapoint is from the mean. More importantly, the number of standard deviations above or below the population mean is from the raw score. The z-score is calculated by the follow:

$$z_i = \frac{x_i - \bar{x}}{s}$$

[20]: def zscore(series):
    return (series - series.mean()) / np.std(series) zscore(ratio).plot(figsize=(12,6)) plt.axhline(zscore(ratio).mean()) plt.axhline(1.0, color='red') plt.axhline(-1.0, color='green')

plt.xlim('2013-01-01', '2018-01-01')
plt.show()
```

By setting two other lines placed at the z-score of 1 and -1, we can clearly see that for the most part, any big divergences from the mean eventually converges back. This is exactly what we want for a pairs trading strategy.

0.2.5 Trading Signals

When conducting any type of trading strategy, it's always important to clearly define and delineate at what point you will actually do a trade. As in, what is the best indicator that I need to buy or sell a particular stock?

Setup rules We're going to use the ratio time series that we've created to see if it tells us whether to buy or sell a particular moment in time. We'll start off by creating a prediction variable Y . If the ratio is positive, it will signal a "buy," otherwise, it will signal a sell. The prediction model is as follows:

What's great about pair trading signals is that we don't need to know absolutes about where the prices will go, all we need to know is where it's heading: up or down.

Train Test Split When training and testing a model, it's common to have splits of 70/30 or 80/20. We only used a time series of 252 points (which is the amount of trading days in a year). Before training and splitting the data, we will add more data points in each time series.

[21]: ratios = df['ADBE'] / df['MSFT'] print(len(ratios) * .70 )
```

1057.0

```
[22]: train = ratios[:1057]
test = ratios[1057:]

Feature Engineering We need to find out what features are actually important in determining the direction of the ratio moves. Knowing that the ratios always eventually revert back to the mean, maybe the moving averages and metrics related to the mean will be important.

Let's try using these features:

- 60 day Moving Average of Ratio
- 5 day Moving Average of Ratio
- 60 day Standard Deviation
- z score

[23]: ratios_mavg5 = train.rolling(window=5, center=False).mean() ratios_mavg60 = train.rolling(window=60, center=False).mean() std_60 = train.rolling(window=60, center=False).std() zscore_60_5 = (ratios_mavg5 - ratios_mavg60)/std_60
plt.figure(figsize=(12, 6))
plt.plot(train.index, train.values)
plt.plot(ratios_mavg5.index, ratios_mavg5.values)
plt.plot(ratios_mavg60.index, ratios_mavg60.values)
plt.legend(['Ratio', '5d Ratio MA', '60d Ratio MA'])

plt.ylabel('Ratio')
plt.show()
```

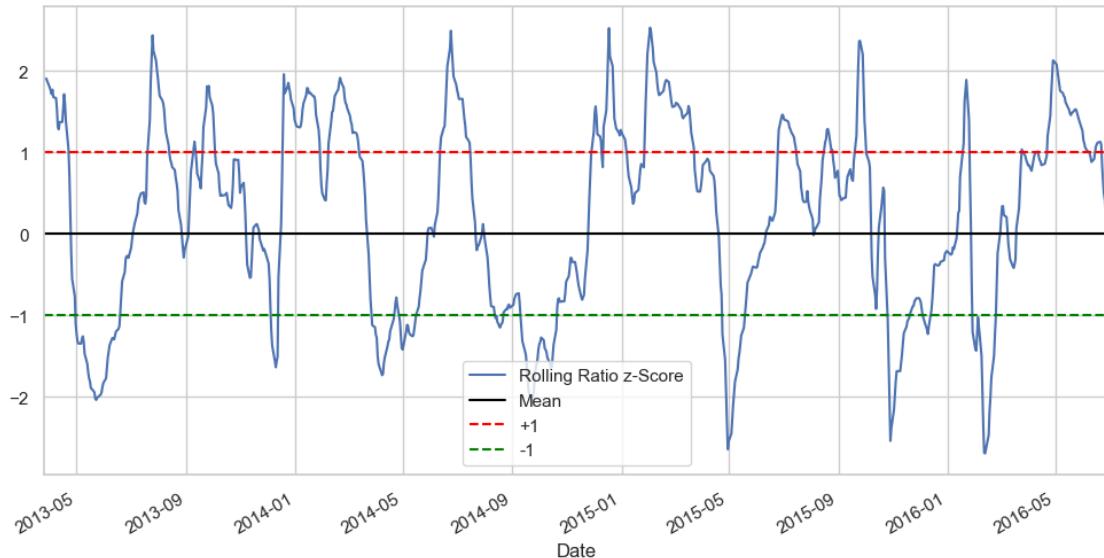

```
[24]: plt.figure(figsize=(12,6))
zscore_60_5.plot()
```

```

plt.xlim('2013-03-25', '2016-07-01') plt.axhline(0, color='black') plt.axhline(1.0, color='red', linestyle='--') plt.axhline(-1.0, color='green', linestyle='--') plt.legend(['Rolling Ratio z-Score', 'Mean', '+1', '-1'])
plt.show()

Creating a Model A standard normal distribution has a mean of 0 and a standard deviation 1. Looking at the plot, it's pretty clear that if the time series moves 1 standard deviation beyond the mean, it tends to revert back towards the mean. Using these models, we can create the following trading signals:

- Buy(1) whenever the z-score is below -1, meaning we expect the ratio to increase.
- Sell(-1) whenever the z-score is above 1, meaning we expect the ratio to decrease.

Training Optimizing We can use our model on actual data

[25]: plt.figure(figsize=(12,6))

train[160:].plot()
buy = train.copy() sell = train.copy()
buy[zscore_60_5>-1] = 0 sell[zscore_60_5<1] = 0 buy[160:].plot(color='g', linestyle='None', marker='^') sell[160:].plot(color='r', linestyle='None', marker='^') x1, x2, y1, y2 = plt.axis()
plt.axis((x1, x2, ratios.min(), ratios.max()))

```

```

plt.xlim('2013-08-15', '2016-07-07')
plt.legend(['Ratio', 'Buy Signal', 'Sell Signal'])
plt.show()

```

```

[26]: plt.figure(figsize=(12,7))
S1 = df['ADBE'].iloc[:881]
S2 = df['MSFT'].iloc[:881]

S1[60:].plot(color='b')
S2[60:].plot(color='c') buyR = 0*S1.copy()
sellR = 0*S1.copy()

When you buy the ratio, you buy stock S1 and sell S2
buyR[buy!=0] = S1[buy!=0] sellR[buy!=0] = S2[buy!=0]

Now we can clearly see when we should buy or sell on the respective stocks.

Now, how much can we expect to make of this strategy?

Not a bad profit for a strategy that is made from scratch.

0.2.6 Areas of Improvement and Further Steps

This is by no means a perfect strategy and the implementation of our strategy isn't the best. However, there are several things that can be improved upon.

1. Using more securities and more varied time ranges For the pairs trading strategy cointegration test, I only used a handful of stocks. Naturally (and in practice) it would be more effective to use clusters within an industry. I only use the time range of only 5 years, which may not be representative of stock market volatility.

2. Dealing with overfitting Anything related to data analysis and training models has much to do with the problem of overfitting. There are many different ways to deal with overfitting like validation, such as Kalman filters, and other statistical methods.

3. Adjusting the trading signals Our trading algorithm fails to account for stock prices that overlap and cross each other. Considering that the code only calls for a buy or sell given its ratio, it doesn't take into account which stock is actually higher or lower.

4. More advanced methods This is just the tip of the iceberg of what you can do with algorithmic pairs trading. It's simple because it only deals with moving averages and ratios. If you want to use more complicated statistics, feel free to do so. Other complex examples include subjects such as the Hurst exponent, half-life mean reversion, and Kalman Filters.

0.2.7 Addendum: Finding the Optimal Trading Window

We also need to give a special mention for overfitting. Overfitting is the most dangerous pitfall of a trading strategy. An overfit algorithm may perform great on a backtest but fails miserably on new unseen data – this means it has not really uncovered any trend in data and no real predictive power.

In our model, we used rolling parameter estimates and we may want to use an optimal window length. We may decide to simply iterate over all possible, reasonable window length and pick the length based on which our model performs the best.

Below I have written a simple loop to create window lengths based on our PnL of training data to find the best window.

[29]: # Find the window length 0-254
that gives the highest returns using this strategy
length_scores = [trade(df['ADBE'].iloc[:1057], df['MSFT'].iloc[:1057], 1, 5)
                  for l in range(255)]
best_length = np.argmax(length_scores)
print ('Best window length:', best_length)

Best window length: 250

As we can see, our optimal window length is from 5 days to 250 days. We can compare this with the testing data and see that this window length is far from optimal. This is because our original choice for the window length probability overfit the sample data.

[30]: length_scores2 = [trade(df['ADBE'].iloc[1057:], df['MSFT'].iloc[1057:],1,5)
                     for l in range(255)]
print (best_length, 'day window:', length_scores2[best_length])
Find the best window length based on this dataset,
and the returns using this window length
best_length2 = np.argmax(length_scores2)
print (best_length2, 'day window:', length_scores2[best_length2])
```

250 day window: 2351.6713831111156
247 day window: 2362.9381460219265

```
[31]: plt.figure(figsize=(15,7))
plt.plot(length_scores)
plt.plot(length_scores2)
plt.xlabel('Window length')
plt.ylabel('Score')
plt.legend(['Training', 'Test'])
plt.show()
```

So really using anything above ~50 days would be a good choice for our trading window. To avoid overfitting, we can use economic reasoning to pick our window length. We can also use other techniques such as Kalman filters, which doesn't require us to specify a length. I'll cover this later in another notebook.

0.1 k-means clustering

K-means clustering is a valuable technique in pairs trading, a strategy that involves identifying pairs of financial assets that exhibit a historical correlation and trading them based on their price movements. The application of K-means clustering in pairs trading can be understood through a detailed exploration of its methodology, data preparation, clustering process, and trading strategy.

0.1.1 Data Collection and Preparation

In pairs trading, the first step involves selecting a set of financial assets, such as stocks or exchange-traded funds (ETFs), that are likely to exhibit a correlation. Historical price data for these assets is then collected over a specified time period, which can range from days to months or even years, depending on the trading strategy.

Once the historical price data is obtained, the next step is to compute the log returns for each asset. The log return for an asset at time t is calculated using the formula:

where P_t is the price of the asset at time t . This transformation normalizes the data and helps to stabilize the variance, making it stationary, which is a crucial requirement for many statistical methods.

After calculating the log returns, a return matrix R is constructed, where each row represents a time period and each column corresponds to an asset. This matrix serves as the foundation for the clustering analysis.

0.1.2 K-means Clustering

The next phase involves applying K-means clustering to the return matrix. The first step in this process is to determine the number of clusters k . This can be achieved through various methods, such as the elbow method, which involves plotting the within-cluster sum of squares against different values of k and identifying the point where the rate of decrease sharply changes.

Once k is established, K-means clustering is executed. The algorithm begins by randomly initializing k centroids, which represent the center of each cluster. Each asset is then assigned to the nearest centroid based on a distance metric, typically the Euclidean distance. The assignment of assets to clusters is performed using the following formula:

$$\text{Assign}(x_i) = \arg \min_j \|x_i - c_j\|^2$$

where x_i is the return vector of asset i and c_j is the centroid of cluster j .

After the initial assignment, the centroids are updated by calculating the mean of all assets assigned to each cluster:

$$c_j = \frac{1}{N_j} \sum_{x_i \in C_j} x_i$$ where N_j is the number of assets in cluster j . This process of assignment and updating continues iteratively until convergence is achieved, which is typically defined as the point where the centroids no longer change significantly or the assignments of assets to clusters remain stable.

0.1.3 Analyzing Clusters and Identifying Pairs

Once the K-means clustering process is complete, the next step is to analyze the resulting clusters. Each cluster contains assets that exhibit similar return patterns, indicating a potential for pairs trading. Traders can identify pairs of assets within the same cluster that have historically moved together.

To select trading pairs, it is essential to evaluate the correlation between the assets in each cluster. A high correlation coefficient suggests that the assets tend to move in tandem, making them suitable candidates for pairs trading. The correlation can be calculated using the Pearson correlation coefficient:

$$\rho_{A,B} = \frac{\text{Cov}(A, B)}{\sigma_A \sigma_B}$$

where $\text{Cov}(A, B)$ is the covariance between the returns of assets A and B , and σ_A and σ_B are the standard deviations of the returns of assets A and B , respectively.

0.1.4 Trading Strategy

In pairs trading, the primary strategy is based on mean reversion. The idea is to exploit the divergence in the price spread between the two assets in a selected pair. The spread S_t between two assets A and B can be defined as:

where $P_{\{A,t\}}$ and $P_{\{B,t\}}$ are the prices of assets A and B at time t . Traders typically establish entry and exit thresholds based on the historical behavior of the spread. For instance, if the spread diverges significantly from its historical mean, a trader might go long on the underperforming asset and short on the outperforming asset, anticipating that the spread will revert to its mean.

Risk management is a critical component of the trading strategy. Traders should implement stop-loss orders to limit potential losses and determine appropriate position sizes based on their risk tolerance and the volatility of the assets involved.

0.1.5 Backtesting and Refinement

Before deploying the pairs trading strategy in a live market, it is essential to backtest the strategy using historical data. This involves simulating trades based on past price movements to evaluate the performance of the strategy. Key performance metrics, such as the Sharpe ratio, maximum drawdown, and overall profitability, should be analyzed to assess the effectiveness of the strategy.

Based on the results of the backtesting, traders may refine their clustering approach, trading thresholds, and risk management techniques to enhance the strategy's performance.

for k in K:
    kmeans = KMeans(n_clusters=k, random_state=42)
    kmeans.fit(scaled_returns_volatility_df) distortions.append(kmeans.inertia_)

Plot the Elbow Method
plt.figure(figsize=(10, 6))
plt.plot(K, distortions, 'bx-') plt.xlabel('Number of Clusters (K)') plt.ylabel('Distortion')
plt.title('Elbow Method')
plt.grid(True)
plt.show()

```

The Elbow Method evaluates the inertia, the sum of squared distances of points to their cluster centroids, to assess clustering quality. As the number of clusters (K) increases, inertia decreases, but the rate of reduction slows, forming an “elbow.” This “elbow” marks the optimal (K), balancing compact clusters and avoiding overfitting.

Suggested number of clusters: 3

This code uses the Silhouette Method and KneeLocator to determine the optimal number of clusters for K-means clustering:

1. Silhouette Score:

For each data point:

- Calculate a , the average distance to points in the same cluster (intra-cluster distance).
- Calculate b , the average distance to points in the nearest neighboring cluster (inter-cluster distance).
- Silhouette score for a point is:

$$s = \frac{b - a}{\max(a, b)}$$

The score ranges from -1 (poor fit) to 1 (perfect fit). The overall silhouette score is the mean of all data points' scores.

2. Optimization:

The method computes silhouette scores for K values from 2 to 14 , identifying the number of clusters with the highest score.

3. KneeLocator:

The elbow or “knee” is detected using the convex curvature of the silhouette curve, identifying the optimal K where clusters are compact and well-separated.

[12]: import matplotlib.pyplot as plt
from sklearn.cluster import KMeans

Number of clusters
c = 5

Fit the k-means model
k_means = KMeans(n_clusters=c, random_state=42)
```

```

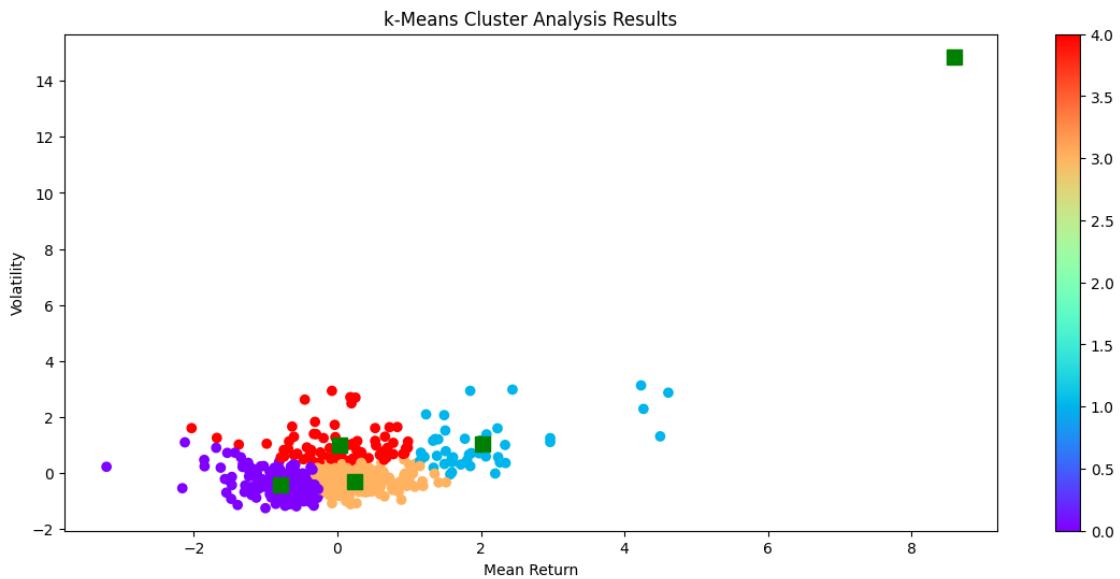

k_means.fit(scaled_returns_volatility_df) prediction = k_means.predict(scaled_returns_volatility_df)

Extract centroids
centroids = k_means.cluster_centers_

Plot the results
fig = plt.figure(figsize=(14, 6)) ax = fig.add_subplot(111) scatter = ax.scatter( scaled_returns_volatility_df.iloc[:, 0],
    scaled_returns_volatility_df.iloc[:, 1], c=k_means.labels_, cmap="rainbow", label=scaled_returns_volatility_df.index
)
ax.set_title('k-Means Cluster Analysis Results') ax.set_xlabel('Mean Return') ax.set_ylabel('Volatility')
plt.colorbar(scatter)

Plot centroids
plt.plot(centroids[:, 0], centroids[:, 1], 'sg' # Green squares for centroids
plt.show()

```

This code performs K-means clustering and visualizes the clusters along with their centroids:

1. K-means Clustering:

- Assigns n data points into c clusters by minimizing the within-cluster sum of squares

(WCSS):

$$\text{WCSS} = \sum_{i=1}^c \sum_{x \in C_i} \|x - \mu_i\|^2$$

where x is a data point, μ_i is the centroid of cluster C_i , and $\|\cdot\|$ is the Euclidean distance.

- The algorithm iteratively:
 1. Initializes centroids randomly or using a predefined method.
 2. Assigns each point to the nearest centroid.
 3. Updates centroids as the mean of assigned points:

$$\mu_i = \frac{1}{|C_i|} \sum_{x \in C_i} x$$

4. Repeats until convergence (no significant change in centroids).

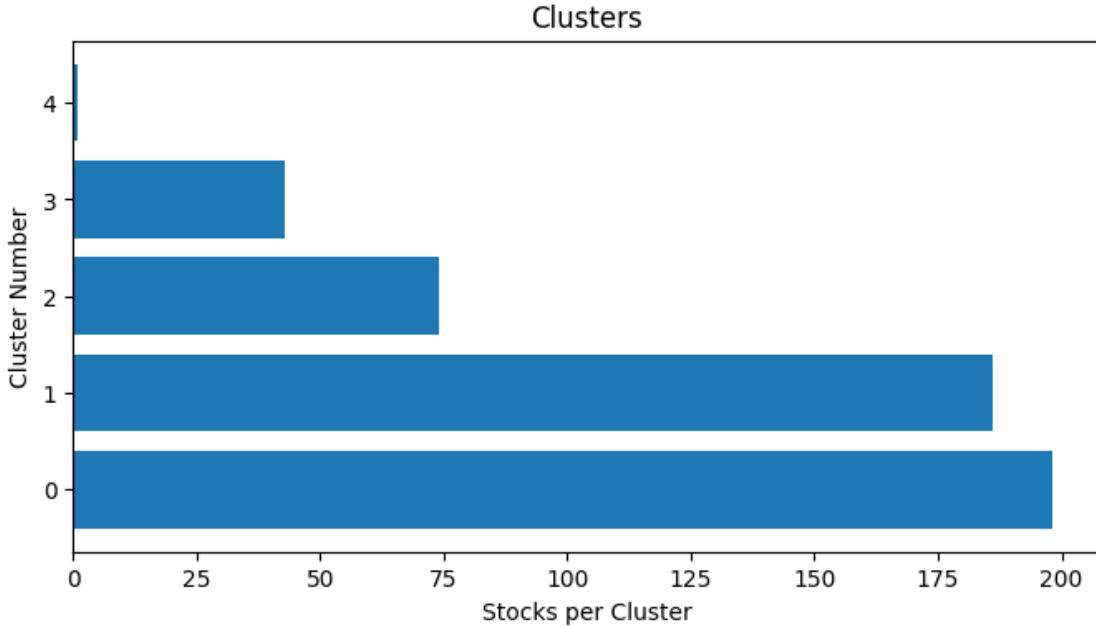

2. Visualization:

- Each point is colored based on its cluster label ($c = 5$).
- Centroids are displayed as green squares at their final locations, calculated using the mean return and volatility of data points in each cluster.

0.2 Hierarchical Clustering

0.2.1 Mathematics Behind Hierarchical Clustering

Hierarchical clustering is a method to build a hierarchy of clusters either through agglomerative (bottom-up) or divisive (top-down) approaches. The agglomerative method proceeds as follows:

1. Initial Setup:

- Start with n data points, each considered a separate cluster:

$$C = \{C_1, C_2, \dots, C_n\}$$

where each C_i contains a single data point.

2. Distance Between Clusters:

Define the distance between two clusters, C_i and C_j , based on the linkage criterion:

- Single linkage (minimum distance):

$$d(C_i, C_j) = \min_{x \in C_i, y \in C_j} \|x - y\|$$

- Complete linkage (maximum distance):

$$d(C_i, C_j) = \max_{x \in C_i, y \in C_j} \|x - y\|$$

- Average linkage (mean pairwise distance):

$$d(C_i, C_j) = \frac{1}{|C_i||C_j|} \sum_{x \in C_i} \sum_{y \in C_j} \|x - y\|$$

- Centroid linkage (distance between centroids):

$$d(C_i, C_j) = \|\mu_i - \mu_j\|$$

where $\mu_i = \frac{1}{|C_i|} \sum_{x \in C_i} x$ is the centroid of cluster C_i .

3. Merging Clusters:

- Iteratively merge the two clusters with the smallest distance:

$$(C_a, C_b) = \arg \min_{C_i, C_j \in C, i \neq j} d(C_i, C_j)$$

- Update the cluster set:

$$C = (C \setminus \{C_a, C_b\}) \cup \{C_a \cup C_b\}$$

4. Repeat Until Convergence:

- Continue merging until all points belong to a single cluster.

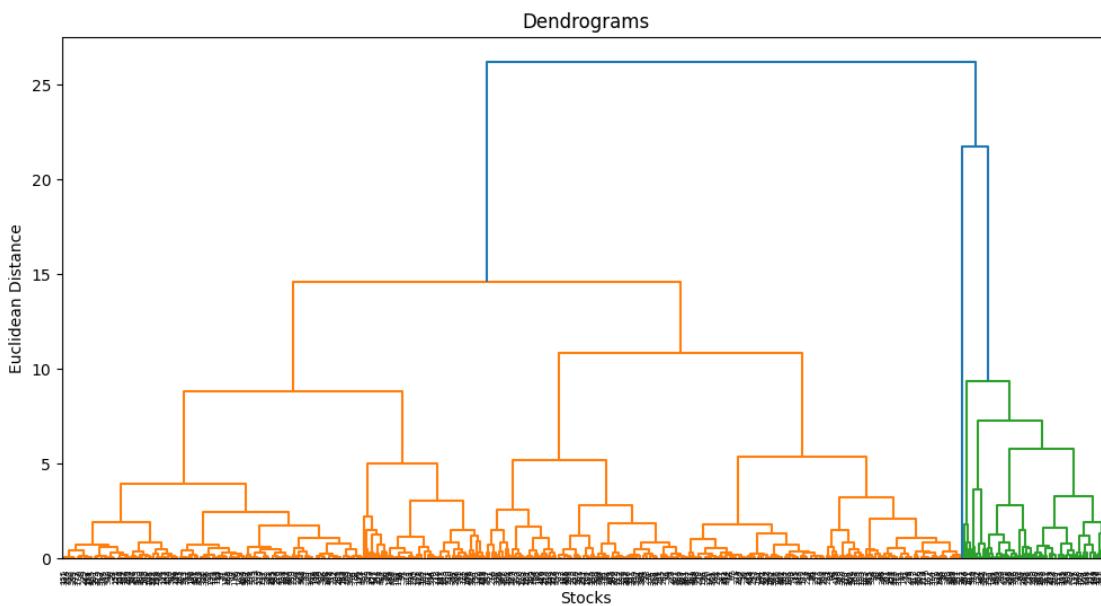

5. Dendrogram Representation:

- The results are visualized as a tree structure, with the height of each merge proportional to the distance $d(C_i, C_j)$.

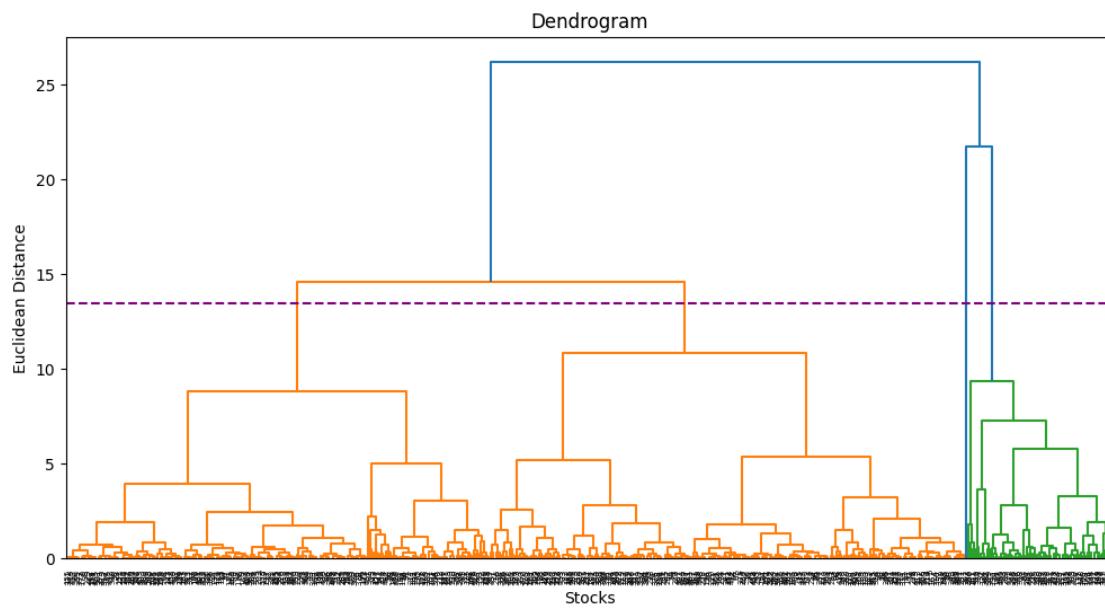

Hierarchical clustering does not require a predefined number of clusters, and the optimal number can be chosen by cutting the dendrogram at a desired height.

[14]: from sklearn.cluster import AgglomerativeClustering import scipy.cluster.hierarchy as shc
```

```
[15]: # Plot the dendrogram

0.3 Affinity Propagation Clustering

0.3.1 Mathematics Behind Affinity Propagation Clustering

Affinity propagation is a clustering algorithm that identifies exemplars (representative points) among data points and assigns all other points to these exemplars based on similarity. It uses a message-passing approach with two key components: responsibility and availability.

1. Input Similarities:

Define a similarity matrix S where each entry $S(i, j)$ represents the similarity between data points i and j :

$$S(i, j) = -\|x_i - x_j\|^2$$

where x_i and x_j are data points in the feature space. Diagonal entries $S(i, i)$, called preferences, control how likely point i is to be chosen as an exemplar.

2. Responsibility Matrix:

Responsibility, $R(i, j)$, measures how well-suited point j is to be an exemplar for point i , considering other candidate exemplars:

$$R(i, j) = S(i, j) - \max_{j' \neq j} [A(i, j') + S(i, j')]$$ where $A(i, j')$ is the availability (see below).

Intuitively, $R(i, j)$ becomes high if j is much better than other points at representing i .

3. Availability Matrix:

Availability, $A(i, j)$, reflects how appropriate it is for i to choose j as its exemplar, considering how many other points i' also want j as an exemplar:

$$A(i, j) = \min \left(0, R(j, j) + \sum_{i' \notin \{i, j\}} \max(0, R(i', j)) \right)$$

Special case for self-availability:

$$A(j, j) = \sum_{i' \neq j} \max(0, R(i', j))$$

4. Iterative Updates:

- Start with $R(i, j) = 0$ and $A(i, j) = 0$.
 - Iteratively update $R(i, j)$ and $A(i, j)$ until convergence.

5. Exemplar Identification:

A point j is chosen as an exemplar if:

$$A(j, j) + R(j, j) > 0$$

Assign each point i to the cluster of the exemplar j with the highest value of $A(i, j) + R(i, j)$:

$$\text{Cluster}(i) = \arg \max_j [A(i, j) + R(i, j)]$$

6. Convergence and Output:

- The algorithm converges when $R(i, j)$ and $A(i, j)$ stabilize or after a fixed number of iterations.
- Outputs clusters based on the identified exemplars.

Affinity propagation does not require the number of clusters k to be predefined, as it determines the number of exemplars automatically based on the similarity matrix and preference values.

Pairs_Trading

1 Strategy details

This strategy is based on the following paper: Examining Pairs Trading Profitability

Link to reference: https://economics.yale.edu/sites/default/files/2024-05/Zhu_Pairs_Trading.pdf

The paper tries to examine the traditional pairs trading. The strategy is based on the mean-reverting property of the spread between two stocks. The strategy is based on the following steps:

1. Find a pair of stocks that are cointegrated.
2. Calculate the spread between the two stocks.
3. Calculate the z-score of the spread.
4. If the z-score is above a certain threshold, go short on the spread.
5. If the z-score is below a certain threshold, go long on the spread.
6. Exit the position when the z-score is close to zero.

There are different ways to find the pairs of stocks that are cointegrated. The paper uses the traditional Euclidean distance method. The paper also mentioned some other methods like the two-step Engle-Granger method, the PCA method, and the clustering method.

In this notebook, I will use the Euclidean distance method to find the pairs of stocks that are cointegrated. I will then implement the pairs trading strategy based on the above steps.

This is a simple implementation of the pairs trading strategy. There are many ways to improve the strategy. For example, we can use machine learning models to predict the spread between the two stocks. We can also use more sophisticated methods to find the pairs of stocks that are cointegrated. But the results of this simple implementation are already promising.

4 Another implementation using the two-step Engle-Granger method

Here is another implementation of the pairs trading strategy using the two-step Engle-Granger method.

For this implementation, I did not explicitly separate the training and testing data. I used the entire data to find the cointegrated pairs and then implemented the pairs trading strategy.

[ ]: def find_cointegrated_pairs(data):
    n = len(data)

    score_matrix = np.zeros((n, n))
    pvalue_matrix = np.ones((n, n))

    keys = range(n)
    pairs = list(itertools.combinations(keys, 2))

    for i, j in pairs:
        print(f'Finding cointegration for {tickers[i]} and {tickers[j]}') try:
            result = coint(data[i]['Close'], data[j]['Close']) except:
            print(f'Error in cointegration test for {tickers[i]} and {tickers[j]}') continue else:
            score = result[0]
            pvalue = result[1]
            score_matrix[i, j] = score
            pvalue_matrix[i, j] = pvalue

    return score_matrix, pvalue_matrix
```

[ ]: # Do not run this cell, load the data directly score_matrix, pvalue_matrix = find_cointegrated_pairs(holder)
```
